WDFW's Master Hunter program (formerly known as AHE) was recently revamped. A primary goal of this revision was to develop a group of highly skilled people who consistently display the highest standards of conduct and are dedicated to conserving wildlife habitat and ensuring future hunting opportunities. Changes to the program included:

- First time enrollees must provide at least 20 hours of volunteer service on a project benefiting state wildlife resources (increased from 12 hours) and 40 hours (increased by 10 hours) every 5 years to recertify.
- Attend Crime Observation and Reporting Training (CORT).
- Submit to an enforcement criminal background check.
- Sign an agreement to abide by the Master Hunter code of ethics.
- No tolerance policy one wildlife violation and they're out of the program
- A primary focus is to engage Master Hunters in efforts that address game damage

Su rvey questions:

1)	Do you believe these changes will result in a better quality of persons participating in the Master Hunter program? Yes No Maybe
2)	Have you allowed Master Hunters to operate on your property in the past 5 years? If so, what is your general assessment of the participants?
3)	If elk or deer became a problem on your property, would you allow a Master Hunter to hunt on your property. Yes No Maybe Only if friends or family members

	Do you believe the Master Hunter program has been successful in reducing the amount of crop damage caused by deer or elk in your area? How could the Master Hunter program be made more effective in doing so?
5)	Do you have a current need for fence repair or other wildlife conservation project?
the	Would you be willing to have Master Hunters provide some or all of necessary labor on a voluntary basis?
6)	Please expand on any of your previous answers or, let us know what your overall opinion of the program is?

 For more information about the Master Hunter program, please visit their web site http://wdfw.wa.gov/hunting/masterhunter/